

Learning Collaboratives: Frequently Asked Questions

1. What is a Learning Collaborative (LC)?

A Learning Collaborative (LC) is an educational approach of using groups to enhance learning by working together with others. Groups of two or more learners collaborate to solve problems, complete tasks, or learn new concepts about a specific health topic. It is a great opportunity to acquire new strategies and receive tools and resources that support the goals of the group.

2. How is a LC different than a regular webinar series?

Webinars are usually a live web based educational presentation that provide information about a given topic. Attendees tend to submit questions or comment after the presentation is complete. LCs are a great way to gain a more complete understanding of a given topic as a group. In a LC, participants will collaborate as a group in a learning session to understand the concepts being presented to them. They will engage in peer to peer learning by sharing ideas, asking questions, debating, and listening to other viewpoints. Participants may also develop or pilot tools and resources that are shared in a learning session to help them reach their identified goal.

3. What is expected of me?

Each LC will have specific learning objectives to enhance services to your patient population. In order to get the full benefit of the LC, participants are asked to participate and commit to all of the learning sessions for that group.

4. Is there a cost to participate?

All our Learning Collaboratives are free of cost to participants. We only ask that you attend all of the learning sessions of the LC you decide to join.

5. What if I miss a learning session?

If you miss a learning session, contact your assigned LC facilitator. The facilitator may provide information you missed and/or offer a make-up session for you to be up to date with what was discussed in the group.

6. How much time will an LC require?

The time dedicated to each learning session will depend on the LC, and the objectives and goals of the participants; however, at a minimum, each learning session is expected to be at least 45 minutes.

7. When will LCs start?

Each LC facilitator will determine the dates and times of the learning sessions based on the recommendation of its participants. Learning sessions are expected to begin this Fall 2020 and will need to be completed by June 30, 2021.

8. How many LCs can I join?

Health Center staff are welcome to participate in more than one Learning Collaborative. A Health Center can even designate different staff to attend an LC depending on the health topic that will be discussed. Feel free to sign up to the LC you are interested in using the form below.
